- 77 ALVARES (EMANUEL) ROTEIRO DA NAVEGAÇÃO DAQUI PERA Y INDIA, MANUSCRIPT ON PAPER, 91 leaves, well written in a cursive book-script, with 2 coloured drawings of the compass. IN A CONTEMPORARY FRENCH "FANFARE" BINDING (style of Eve). Dark olive morocco, sides decorated with curving olive sprays, scroll decoration and geometrical compartments with interlacings at sides ; the blank oval centre-piece filled in at a later date. Gilt back decorated with curving olive sprays, g.e. In a green morocco case. (7¾ by 5½ in.) c. 1545

* * This Portuguese manuscript contains detailed instructions for the voyage from Lisbon to India, via Brazil and the Cape of Good Hope ; the return voyage to Lisbon ; route from the Strait of Mecca to India ; information on the storms to be encountered off the Indian coast ; soundings off the Cape of Good Hope ; Mozambique ; the Atlantic Islands, etc. The manuscript summarises the observations and experiences of a skilled navigator who had made the voyages many times and was able to give valuable advice as to the most suitable seasons for travelling, and the safest geographical course. There is a table giving the daily declination of the sun for a period of four years ; and two coloured drawings showing the points and degrees of the compass.

The manuscript begins with a "Regimento da altura do polo as meio dia" (or Rule for finding the altitude of the pole at midday) by means of the graduated astrolabium. The system affords a proof that the mathematicians and cosmographers ashore were in some respects behind the practical pilot in nautical science. It reveals that observations of latitude by the meridian altitude of the sun are earlier than has been hitherto believed.

The Regimento is followed by quadrennial solar tables for the years 1517-20 and then by a collection of various "Rutters" or sailing directions for navigation between Portugal and India. It also contains a Rutter of the Red Sea which appears to be the second oldest known, and a hitherto unknown description of the east coast of Madagascar.

The author of this manuscript was the Pilot Emanuel Alvares who had been Pilot of Joao de Castro on his voyage to India in 1538, and who was one of the most experienced seamen of his time. There is another contemporary copy in the Bibliothèque Nationale (Fonds Portugais, ancien, No. 48) but no other complete version is known to exist, and the work has never been printed, though extracts from a similar copy are embodied in Linschoten's "Itinerario."

The manuscript has in three places (inside cover at beginning and end and on the first page of text) the autograph signature of André Thevet (1502-90), cosmographer-royal of France, with the dates 1563 and 1567. This celebrated geographer paid two visits to Brazil with the Fleet of Villegagnon which endeavoured to found a colony on the Rio de Janeiro. Cp. Lot 97.

A DIEPPE PAR NICOLAS DESLIENS, 1567

* * Nicolas Desliens was one of a very remarkable and enterprising group of Normans, who as pilots, explorers, corsairs and map-makers contributed more than any other Frenchmen in the sixteenth century to make their country a great maritime power. From the number of important maps which they made they are known as the Dieppe School of cartographers. Among them was Jean Rotz or Ross, a roving Scottish navigator born at Dieppe, who was for a short time in the service of Henry VIII and made for him an important and beautiful atlas, the "Booke of Idrography" (1542), which is now in the British Museum; Pierre Desceliers of Arques, one of whose maps of the world (1550), richly ornamented with coloured drawings of exotic animals and eastern potentates, is also in the British Museum; Jacques le Moyne, who took part in the ill-fated attempts of the Huguenots to establish a colony in Florida (1562-65) and died in England, where he was a friend of Sir Walter Raleigh and of Hakluyt; and the greatest artist of all, Guillaume la Testu, Royal pilot, American explorer and corsair, who died fighting beside Drake near Nombre de Dios in 1572.

Three maps of the world are known from the hand of Nicolas Desliens. The earliest, now in the Royal Library at Dresden, is dated 1541, and is therefore the second earliest known from the Dieppe School. His second, which is smaller than most of the maps of his fellow cartographers, was drawn in 1566 and is in the Bibliothèque Nationale. His third, the map now offered for sale, resembles the Paris map very closely in size and style, but is in a far better state of preservation and has some original features.

The following are some principal cartographical points.

N. America. New Brunswick ('Terre a bretons') or Nova Scotia coast marked with a Genoese flag, a point of much interest in view of the fact that the exact part of the American coast discovered by the Genoese John Cabot during his famous voyage from Bristol in 1497 has never been exactly determined, but would probably have been familiar 70 years later to the Normans, whose fishing boats were among the first to follow him. Greenland absent, Labrador stretching north-eastwards to take its place. St. Lawrence and tributaries very accurately drawn, showing knowledge of Cartier's Canadian explorations in 1534-41. 'Port roial' in Florida commemorates the Huguenot colony of 1562-5.

S. America. This map is believed to be the earliest to show Villégagnon's colony in Brazil of 1555 (France Antarctique; cp. lot 77). It is not shown on Desliens' map of 1566 and its appearance here may be a memorial, as the colony was dispossessed in 1567. The mythical Terra Australis appears to the S. of the Straits of Magellan.

Asia. The large continent S. of Sumatra, lettered Java la Grande, is a feature peculiar to the Norman maps. Its similarity in size and position to Australia has led to the theory that the northern coasts of Australia may have been explored by Portuguese from the East Indies and the resulting charts brought to France by the survivors of the expedition to Sumatra led by Jean Parmentier of Dieppe in 1528-9.

EARLY MAPS BY FRENCH CARTOGRAPHERS ARE OF EXTRA-ORDINARY RARITY: THIS IS A REMARKABLY FINE AND INTERESTING SPECIMEN.

Seran, Lavaur, Tarn, France

TO WHOM THEY HAVE DESCENDED FROM HIS HALF-BROTHER, THE DUC DE MONTEBELLO, GREAT-GRANDSON OF MARSHAL LANNES, FIRST DUC DE MONTEBELLO, WHOSE WIFE, THE DUCHESSE DE MONTEBELLO, WAS CHIEF LADY-IN-WAITING TO THE EMPRESS.

100 NAPOLEON I. A. L. s. (N.), 1.p. 8vo, Liegnitz, May 28 [1813], to the Empress Marie-Louise :

Mon amie, j'ai reçu ta lettre du 21. Je vois avec plaisir que mon fils commence à parler et à bien prononcer les mots. Tout ce que tu me dis de sa nature me fait bien désirer de le voir et j'espère qu'à mon retour il parlera fort bien. Ménage ta santé. J'ignorais que Corvisart est revenu de sa maladie cela me fait plaisir. Adieu mio bene N.
Liegnitz le 28 mai.

* * * At the top of the page is a note in the handwriting of Corvisart, stating that this letter was given to him by the Empress on Feb. 28, 1814, as he wished to have a specimen of the Emperor's writing.

Jean-Nicolas Corvisart-Desmarets, 1755-1821, a distinguished doctor, had attended Napoleon as First Consul and was kept by him at Court : he was present at the birth of the King of Rome and remained the personal physician of Marie-Louise, who mentions him several times in her diaries, and seems to have stood in some awe of him : for instance, on her way to Mayence (see lot 101), as the dinner at Châlons-sur-Marne was spoilt, she eat some sour cream et j'en eus une indigestion qui me fit faire de beaux sermons de Mr. Bourdier mais je ne les crains pas comme ceux de Mr. Corvisart.

Corvisart was one of the few intimate friends of the Duchesse de Montebello ; from July 18, 1812, when the Empress returned from Dresden, till Dec. 18, when the Emperor returned from Russia, Marie-Louise saw hardly anybody but these two and her personal attendants. In April, 1814, according to Masson, Corvisart formed one of a small group including also Bausset and Saint-Aignan, which centred round the duchess, and strove to separate the Empress from her husband. There can be no doubt that this letter was given by Corvisart to the duchess.

- 101 MARIE-LOUISE (EMPRESS), AUTO. DIARY, about 109 pp. 12mo, July 23-August 9, 1813, written in a pocket book, original red boards, silver mounts, leather back, the upper cover with medallion lettered "Souvenir," wash-leather case with initials J.D. in red, silver pencil, A MOST INTERESTING MANUSCRIPT

* * This is the autograph manuscript of a portion of the diary of which a contemporary copy was offered for sale in December, 1934: it contains the account of the Empress's journey to meet Napoleon at Mayence, their stay there together, and her return. Throughout the diary her affection for him is constantly shown: it begins, for example,

C'est le 23 juillet que j'entrepris mon voyage à Mayence. Il n'y en eut jamais qui fut commencé aussi gaiement, l'idée de revoir l'Empereur après trois grands mois de séparation m'enchantait et je crains bien que Mme. de Montesquiou n'ait dit que j'avais un cœur de bronze lorsque je pris congé de mon fils avec un œil tout à fait sec (ce qui ne m'arrive pas ordinairement).

while almost at the end she speaks of arriving back at Compiègne.

toute étonnée de me trouver dans un aussi grand palais mais fort contente de trouver un bon lit et de belles chambres, c'est une bonne chose que de se trouver chez soi: ce plaisir ne fut cependant pas sans amertume je pensais aux jours que j'y ai passé avec l'Empereur et je passai ma nuit à pleurer.

When Napoleon was due at Mayence she watched the road by which he would come all day long:

Mon attente fut vaine et je me couchai mourant de sommeil. Tout le monde était si fatigué que lorsque l'Empereur arriva il traversa tous les salons où le page et mes femmes couchaient sans que personne ne l'entendit. Je n'essaierai pas de décrire toute la joie que j'éprouvois de le revoir, cela ne se laisse pas décrire, ou ne peut que le sentir.

Nevertheless, all was not plain sailing: one of the pages reproduced shows that she was sometimes afraid of the Emperor, and on one of the few evenings that they spent together

Après le dîner l'Empereur me proposa à 10 heures du soir une promenade sur la terrasse, j'eus beau faire des observations sur mes manches courtes et sur ce que la faculté m'avait recommandé; il se fâcha; il traita médecine et médecins de bêtes et je fus contraint d'obéir, cela me valut un rhumatisme dans le bras droit.

For the rest, the diary gives a most vivid and detailed account of the places she passed through, the people she met, the discomforts of travelling, even of some of the meals she eat or could not eat—such as one at Châlons-sur-Marne, consisting of mouton qui sentait le bouc, de poulets rôtis qu'on était très bon de nommer ainsi car je crois que c'était de vieux coqs, et d'œufs qui avaient au moins 8 ou 10 jours.

Marie Louise was fond of food: perhaps that is why she transforms the Prefect of Mayence, the ex-terrorist Jean Bon St. André, into plain Monsieur Jambon!

The diary probably passed to Corvisart: the first page, otherwise blank, bears the inscription, "Journal de voyage de l'impératrice Marie-Louise," apparently in his writing.

- 102 MARIE-LOUISE (EMPRESS) A. L. s. 2½ pp. 8vo, St. Cloud, Nov. 7, 1813, to Napoleon, EXTREMELY RARE: Masson (L'Impératrice Marie-Louise, 2nd Ed., 1902, p. v) knew of only one letter from her to the Emperor. This letter has been kept in the pocket of the diary (see last lot) and probably never reached Napoleon, who was back in Paris two days after it was written. The letter begins:

Mon cher Ami. J'ai reçu ce matin tes deux lettres du 4 et du 5 . . .

The letters referred to, written by Napoleon at Mayence on Nov. 4 and 5, 1813, were included in lots 94 and 95 of the series of his letters to the Empress sold in these rooms Dec. 17, 1934.

Marie-Louise then refers to his decision to summon the Corps Législatif for Dec. 2 and to some captured flags which were to be ceremoniously presented to her at the Tuileries: de Ségur thinks that Marshal Clarke, duc de Feltre, Minister of War, who was to accompany them, vienne à cheval aux Tuileries, il dit que pour un cortège militaire cela sera beaucoup plus imposant.

Later she speaks of Madame Mère, and of Napoleon's brother Louis, who was on his way to Mayence and had been alluded to in one of the Emperor's latest letters.

Ton fils t'embrasse il se porte à merveille quoiqu'un peu maussade aujourd'hui mais les enfants sont si fantasques je ne suis aussi pas en faveur car il m'a dit la plus grosse sottise qu'il connaisse Maman, va-t-en à Paris, quand il est mécontent de quelqu'un il l'envoie tout de suite là.

She did not take her duties as Regent too seriously:

Je suis un peu fatiguée de l'audience de ce matin il y a eu beaucoup de monde et des disputations de cinq bonnes villes d'Anvers, de Cologne, de Bruxelles, de Nantes, de Rennes et je crois qu'il y en avait encore une sixième mais je ne m'en rappelle plus, etc.

- 103 NAPOLEON I. A. L. s. (N.) 2 pp. 8vo, Fontainebleau, April 17 [1814], 6 p.m., to the Empress Marie-Louise, A LETTER OF POIGNANT INTEREST:

Ma bonne Louise, j'ai reçu ta lettre, j'y vois toutes tes peines ce qui accroît les miennes. Je vois avec bien du plaisir que Corvisart t'accompagne. Je lui en sais un gré infini: il justifie par cette noble conduite toute l'opinion que j'avais de lui, dis-le lui de ma part qu'il m'envoie un petit bulletin fréquemment (?) de ton état. Tâche d'aller de suite aux eaux d'Aix que l'on m'a dit que Corvisart t'avait conseillées, porte-toi bien, conserve ta santé pour ton vieil ami et pour ton fils qui a besoin de tes soins.

When this letter was written, Metternich and the allied sovereigns were intriguing to separate Marie-Louise from her husband, and they had found an accomplice in the Empress's chief lady-in-waiting, the Duchesse de Montebello, who had no desire either to go to Elba herself or to incur the odium of deserting the Empress. Marie-Louise was ill—or thought herself to be so: the Emperor had asked for a report on her health. This report, which was lot 1637 in the Rosebery sale, July 24, 1933, was drawn up by Corvisart on April 11 at Orléans under the eyes of the duchess. It was as pessimistic as it could be, forbade the Emperor even to express a wish that the Empress should accompany him, and said that she must do a cure at Aix at once.

Ainsi a-t-on trouvé le moyen (says Masson) de convaincre Napoléon et vraisemblablement Marie-Louise que, si elle va partager la déportation princière de l'île d'Elbe, autant vaut pour elle monter à l'échafaud.

During the Hundred Days Corvisart was reappointed chief medical attendant of the Emperor. Later, however, Napoleon found him out and at St. Helena referred to him as "un misérable."

The letter continues :

Je vais partir pour l'île d'Elbe d'où je t'écirai et ferai tout arranger pour te recevoir, aussi viens souvent. Adresse tes lettres au vice-roi [Eugène de Beauharnais] et au roi de Naples [Murat] et à ton oncle si comme on le dit il est fait grand duc de Toscane.

Adieu, ma bonne Louise. Ma vie sera tout entière pour toi et mes sentiments ne changeront jamais. Donne un baiser à mon fils ton f (? fidèle)

Fontainebleau le 17 à 6 h. du soir.

This letter fills a gap in the series sold last December, between three letters written April 12-15 (lot 126) and three on April 19 (lot 127). It has been published, partially and incorrectly, by Masson, l'Impératrice Marie-Louise, 2nd ed., Paris, 1902, pp. 593-4, and by Cabanés, Napoléon intime.

At the top of the first page of the letter is an autograph inscription by Corvisart :

Lettre autographe de l'Empereur Napoléon. Remise par S.M. Marie-Louise à Schönbrunn le 31 mai 1814, jour de mon départ. Je l'ai sollicitée, parce qu'il y est question de moi.

The Property of a Collector.

- 104 BUONAPARTE (LETIZIA), Napoleon's mother, 15 L. s. (Madame), about 35 pp. 4to and 8vo, to a high dignitary of the Empire, who is addressed as Monseigneur, and referred to as "Votre Altesse," apparently all written 1812-3, friendly letters, sending thanks for letters or information, referring to the Emperor and her other children, giving news of her health, and almost invariably expressing a hope that peace will soon be concluded.

On Oct. 6, 1812, she writes with regard to the burning of Moscow that the account of it m'a inspiré de l'horreur pour une nation, qui se dit civilisée, et qui livre aux flammes des milliers de blessés et ses villes les plus florissantes. Dieu nous préserve de les voir jamais sur notre territoire.

On July 8, 1813, she speaks of "la malheureuse affaire de Vittoria" and finds her only consolation in the fact that "le Roi [i.e. her son Joseph, King of Spain] personnellement n'a éprouvé aucun accident." She refers also to a rumour that Soult is to assume the command of all the armies in Spain and wonders "ce que le Roi devient au milieu de tout cela."

In one of the last letters of the series, written on Oct. 3, 1813, she refers to the fall of the Kingdom of Westphalia, of which her youngest son Jerome had been made King by Napoleon :

Une lettre que la Reine m'avait écrite, il y a quelques jours, m'avait presque préparé à cet événement. Je le vois arriver avec fermeté et résignation. La seule chose qui pourrait abattre mon courage ce serait s'il était arrivé ou venait à arriver quelque accident personnel à mes enfants.

- 105 JOSEPHINE (EMPRESS) 11 A. L. s., about 11 pp. sm. 4to, 1804-11, to the same (Mon Cousin), friendly letters, thanking him for letters and marks of attention and sending family news. Several letters mention her son Eugène de Beauharnais, Viceroy of Italy, and speak with pride of his achievements, of his wish to serve his Emperor and country, and of his satisfaction when "l'Empereur est content." A letter written after the divorce speaks with feeling of the kindness of Marie-Louise to the writer's daughter-in-law, and a remarkable letter from Mayence, Jan. 2, 1807, throws light on her relations to the Emperor :

J'espérais voir l'Empereur bientôt mais son départ pour la Pologne a suspendu le mien, il m'en dédommage un peu en m'écrivant tous les jours. Cette aimable attention me prouve qu'il sent toute la peine que doit me causer sa longue absence et qu'il désire me la rendre moins pénible. J'aime à vous parler des consolations que j'éprouve parce que je sais que vous les partagez. Je ne sais pas encore si les circonstances permettront à l'Empereur de m'appeller auprès de lui, etc.

- 106 MURAT (Joachim) 3 A. L. s., one initials only, 4 pp. 4to, May 12-Sep. 20, 1809, from Naples, to the same (Mon Cousin), friendly letters asking for news and complaining of being neglected :

Nous annoncez-vous la paix ? la fuite des anglais ? Nous ne savons rien ici. Nous sommes dans un autre monde, etc.

Monday, 8th April, 1935.

- 107 MARIE-LOUISE (EMPRESS) 14 A. L. s., about 11 pp. 4to and 3 pp. 8vo, June 25, 1812-March 14, 1814, to the same (Mon Cousin), sending news of herself and the Emperor, etc.

Prague, June 25, 1812.

Je suis bien touchée des vœux et sentiments des habitants de la capitale, je les apprécie (sic) bien et chercherai toute ma vie, à leur prouver l'attachement et l'estime que m'inspire le peuple français. . . . Je reçois des nouvelles excellentes de l'Empereur ; il se fatigue beaucoup, mais sa santé n'en est que meilleur. (She wrote about the Emperor on the same day to the same effect to Madame Mère. Rosebery Sale lot 1615.)

St. Cloud, Sep. 29, 1812.

Il faut espérer que la prise de Moscou nous amènera bientôt une paix durable.

May 26 [1813], 10 a.m.

Sending news of the battle of Bautzen :

. . . l'Empereur avait poursuivi les armées russes et prussiennes jusqu'à la nuit ils se sont arrêtés à la faveur des nombreux retranchements qu'ils avaient préparés sur les positions d'Hochkirch ce matin 21 sa majesté a de nouveau attaqué l'ennemi de front tandis qu'il le faisait tourner en arrière de son extrême droite par le corps du Prince de la Moskowa et par celui du général Lauriston. A 5 heures toutes les positions sont enlevées et la bataille est gagnée jamais l'Empereur n'a obtenu de succès plus complet, etc.

Mayence, July 28, 1813.

Written while she was staying there with the Emperor during the armistice :

. . . L'Empereur est arrivé bien portant et pas fatigué il a même engraisé, il est très content et s'occupe toujours beaucoup. . . . Je crains bien que l'Empereur ne passe pas un long séjour ici cette idée m'attriste bien, etc.

Cherbourg, Aug. 31, 1813.

Alluding to the battle of Dresden—the last of the great Napoleonic victories :

Je viens de recevoir à l'instant votre lettre avec la dépêche télégraphique qui est bien bonne. J'en suis si contente que la tête m'en tourne. J'espère que cette belle et brillante victoire ramènera bientôt l'Empereur vers nous. . . . Je peux me figurer la joie que vous éprouverez des bonnes nouvelles, car je connais votre attachement pour l'Empereur, etc.

St. Cloud, Oct. 27 [1813], 10 p.m.

Je viens de recevoir les lettres de l'Empereur du 19 et 22 il se portait bien malgré les étonnantes fatigues qu'il a eu. Il me dit je me porte bien j'ai eu de grandes batailles ou j'ai eu l'avantage j'ai fait de grandes pertes je t'écirai demain en détail.

The letters from Napoleon referred to, in which he evidently sent the first news of his disastrous defeat at Leipzig, were not among those sold on Dec. 17, 1934.

March 14, 1814.

Ne sachant pas si le Roi vous a fait dire la bonne nouvelle qu'il a reçue je m'empresse de vous la communiquer. L'Empereur a attaqué hier dans la journée le corps du général St. Priest fort de 15000 hommes, l'a détruit lui a fait 5000 prisonniers et lui a pris toute son artillerie et ses bagages. Le général en chef est grièvement blessé, etc.

Come and see an absurdity . . . —a private play, acted by Dickens, myself, etc. D[ickens] and myself cannot come to Stratford. All good wishes attend your celebration . . . Sergeant Kit is akin to many Shakespearian people we know—and the Swan of Avon . . . would not have objected to shake hands with Archer & Captain Plume. Asks for a sight of the Washington Irving proofs. Mrs. Macready has his Chesterfield. Dickens will not be in town again until after the 22nd. Wants memoranda about Goldsmith. Dickens would have told you that the next ballot is not yet fixed for the Athm. (Athenaeum). Who possesses the original painting by Reynolds of Oliver Goldsmith . . . can I get the loan of it for a very careful line engraving? Have you seen the will of Newbury the bookseller. Bolton Corney says he has a Goldsmith MS. Mrs. Gaskell is come up from Manchester. . . . And I have got up a little dinner here . . . when the party will be Mrs. G[askell], Mrs. Dickens, Dickens, Miss Hogarth. Is reading Elwin's Gray. Murray has suggested an edition of Swift. Leigh Hunt is dining with him. I shewed Dickens your letter, he laughed heartily. Dickens is hard at work finishing Dorrit and furnishing Gads Hill. . . . Dyce has interrupted his finishing of Shakespeare to get to Moxon a volume of Webster. Suggests a dinner. You two, and the Dickenses (it is also their Wedding Day) and ourselves. Poor Jerrold! What a shock his death has been. Is to stay with "old Landor." Cunningham's money difficulties: why not ask Dickens.

From the Estate of the late Mrs. Beryl Dodgson,

WHO, JOINTLY WITH HER SISTER, INHERITED THEM FROM THEIR FATHER,
THE LATE COLONEL C. SHELLEY LEIGH-HUNT, GRANDSON OF J. H.
LEIGH-HUNT.

- 205 [SHELLEY (Percy Bysshe)] An extremely interesting collection of 30 A. L. s. by J. H. Leigh Hunt, addressed to P. B. Shelley and his wife, Mary, at Pisa, from August 27th, 1817, to July 21st, 1822.

In the first letter, from 13, Lisson Grove North, Hunt asks, "What think you of your Counsellor Robert Owen? He has made a great sensation in town and will unlock myriads of tongues."

He talks of visiting "a sort of conversazione at Lamb's . . . with infinite delight. . . . Lamb's writings are being collected for publication by Ollier and are now indeed going through the press."

Writing from 8, York Buildings, New Road, 12 Nov., 1818, he says: "I have been writing a Pocket-Book, the booksellers tell me it will do exceedingly well, and Shelley will be at once pleased and surprised to hear that it is my own property. . . . but Shelley will be in good company,—at least I may speak for Keats, & Shelley will speak for some one else. . . . Somebody told Mr. Godwin the other day that I said Milton was an atheist. So he wrote me a very polite letter to know what grounds I had for calling him so. I answered and said none. . . . You of course have heard of Peacock's appointment to the India House; we joke him upon his new Oriental grandeur, his Brahminical bearing. . . . I can do nothing with my tragedy. . . . Kean has rejected it. . . . I unfortunately said that there were two characters in it, either of which, it was thought, would suit him and it turned out just afterwards, that he had a mortal antipathy to having any second Richard in the field. . . ."

In Sept., 1819, he writes: "I must ask you, Shelley, to give me a few verses, if you have any to spare, for the next Pocket-Book." He goes on to speak of "Smollett was buried at Livorno. There were some things about his writings very unpleasant; but he was an honest man, & is understood to have done immense good to the poor wounded sailors in naval fights by those pictures of pitiless surgery and amputation in Roderick Random. Fielding was buried at Lisbon. We have no poet out of our own green earth. But Chaucer as well as Milton paid a visit to Italy, so did Gray, so did Drummond, Donne & the Earl of Surrey. . . ."

Writing from 13, Mortimer Terrace, Kentish Town, he complains of ill-health and pecuniary difficulties, though reports that "The Examiner" and "The Indicator" have been going better.

In April, 1820, he wrote of Shelley's Tragedy "The Cenci": "Shelley's Tragedy is out and flourishing, I receive both as his friend & Representative, congratulations on all sides, upon the dedication, the preface, & the drama, Ollier, who thought it would not sell . . . had to tell Henry Hunt the other day, that the first edition had almost all gone off already. . . . What a noble work, Shelley, here you give us! What a true, stately, & yet affectionate mixture of poetry, & philosophy, & human nature, & horror, & all-redeeming sweetness of intention. . . ."

From the Vale of Health, Hampstead, he writes on July 10th, 1821: "We have had nothing but illness in our family ever since I came to get well in our little packing-case here, dignified with the title of house. . . . Shelley has heard I suppose by this time, that the young bookseller [W. Clark] who published his Queen Mab without leave, has been prosecuted by the Society for Vice."

In the following month, from Hampstead, he says: ". . . I am delighted to hear that you meant to do honour to poor Keats, and shall take care to notice it publicly without loss of time . . . Hazlitt . . . if he attacks you again I have told him in so many words, that he must expect me to be his public antagonist. . . ."

Monday, 8th April, 1935.

On Sept. 21st, 1821, he writes an important letter discussing Lord Byron: "... With regard to the proposed publication of Lord B., about which you talk so modestly, he has it in his power, I believe, to set up not only myself & family in our finances again, but one of the best-hearted men in the world, my brother & his. I allude, of course, to the work in which he proposes me to join him. . . . I am not so modest as you are by a great deal & do not mean to let you be so either. What? are there not three of us? . . . We will divide the World between us, like the Triumvirate, & you shall be the sleeping partner, if you will, only it shall be with a Cleopatra."

Hunt now writes five letters concerning his unfortunate journey to Italy, accompanied by his wife and six children. He writes from the Brig Jane at Blackwall on Nov. 16th, and by the following March had only reached Plymouth, and then hopes to sail in a fortnight.

From Genoa on the 15th June, 1822, he announces his arrival, and six days after—still at Genoa—he is distressed by the non-arrival of £50 which his brother John was expected to send.

The correspondence concludes with two letters to Mrs. Shelley after the death of her husband, Pisa 20 July [1822]: "Dearest Mary, I trust you will have set out on your return from that dismal place, before you receive this. . . . I belong to those whom Shelley loves, and that all which is possible for me to do for them, now & ever, is theirs. I will grieve with them, endure with them, and if necessary, work for them while I have life."

On the following day he writes: "My dear Mary, Will you let the bearer know whether you can see me now, or whether I shall wait longer? I have persuaded Marianne to let me come alone first."

With Auto. draft of A. L. s. from Leigh Hunt to Mrs. Shelley.

From Pisa he writes of "... the death of Shelley ... the dreadful accident that has plunged all of us here in sorrow. . . . " . . . Lord Byron, Trelawney . . . sailed for Greece on the 17th. I did not see the former. His unconquerable avarice prevented his supplying me with money, & a remnant of shame caused him to avoid me."

A.L.s. "Mary W. Shelley," 3pp. 4to. Paris Aug. 13, 1823, to Mrs. Williams: " . . . I have three good friends in the World . . . I have you . . . Hunt . . . and I have Trelawney . . ." Says she intends to publish the Shelley MSS. that she has.

A.L.s. 4pp. 4to. Genoa, Oct. 15, 1822, to Mrs. Williams, concerning her life in Genoa with the Hunt family she says: " . . . Lord Byron's rheumatism has left him, but has left him . . . very bilious, cross and sleepy. . . . I have copied for him the 10th canto of Don Juan. It is not in his fine style."

Concerning the yacht "Don Juan" she writes: "The Don Juan was found her topsails down and her other sails fast. Trelawny tells me that in his, Roberts & every other sailor's opinion that she was run down; of course by that fishing boat. . . . It may add a most bitter pang to know that they might have been saved. . . . My little Percy is quite well and good. . . ."

- 211 SHELLEY (Mary) A. L. s. 4 pp. 4to, Genoa, Sept. 29th, 1822, to T. Love Peacock

Lord Byron and all her friends advised her not to return to England, suggests that Peacock and Byron should apply to Sir Timothy Shelley for an allowance for her.

" . . . Lord Byron is very kind to me, promises to do his duty as executor, & really appears interested in my fate. . . . In the mean time remain here with the Hunts, spending little and passing the miserable hours as I can; better here than in England. . . ."

- 212 WILLIAMS (E. E.) Captain of the yacht Don Juan, perished with Shelley. A. L. s. (initials) 3 pp. 4to, Leghorn, Saturday, to his wife:

" . . . have been kept day after day waiting for Shelley's definite arrangements with Lord B. relative to poor Hunt, . . . whom he has treated vilely. . . . In Lord B's family all is confusion, the Cutthroats he is so desirous to have about him have involved him in a second affair. . . ."

With two portraits of Williams, drawn by himself (3)

- 213 MEDWIN (Thos.) A. L. s. 3 pp. 4to, to Mrs. Williams (1823), mentioning Lord Byron and his circle (1)

Parisiis, apud Audouenum Parvum, 1556

- * * * This volume is No. 355 in Miss Shipman's edition of Le Roux de Lincy; according to that work, which quotes an old number of the Bulletin du Bibliophile, it was at one time in the Bibliothèque de la Ville, Chaumont, and an inscription on the title shows that it had belonged previously to the Oratorians at Langres. It is interesting from several points of view: first because the publisher, Oudin Petit, was a Huguenot who died for his faith in the massacre of St. Bartholomew; second because the translator, Jean Picot, was in all probability a connexion of Grolier by marriage, the great collector's daughter Anne having married François Picot, a member of the Paris Parlement; Grolier no doubt had this copy of his relative's work specially printed on fine paper and the initials skilfully illuminated; but above all because of the beauty of the binding itself and the extreme rarity in Grolier's library of this type by the distinguished craftsman who executed it. A search through about two hundred facsimiles of Grolier bindings has revealed only four others, namely, in order of date:—

1. Ant Codri Urcei Orationes Bologna, 1502. Bibliothèque Méjanes, Aix-en-Provence: unpublished.

2. Acta scitu dignissima conciliorum Milan, 1540. Robert Hoe library (176 Bindings, Pl. 14), afterwards W. T. Wallace.

3. Lazius, De gentium migrationibus, Basle, 1557, Rylands Library, Manchester: reproduced in the catalogue of the Burlington F.A.C. Exhibition, Pl. XXXV.

4. Aeneas Vicus, Ex libris XXIII commentariorum, Venice, 1560. British Museum: reproduced by W. Y. Fletcher, Foreign Bookbindings in the B.M. Pl. XIV.

TO HARRIET * * * * *

Whose is the love that, gleaming through the world,
Wards off the poisonous arrow of its scorn?
Whose is the warm and partial praise,
Virtue's most sweet reward?

Beneath whose looks did my reviving soul
Riper in truth and virtuous daring grow?
Whose eyes have I gazed fondly on,
And loved mankind the more?

Harriet! on thine:—thou wert my purer mind;
Thou wert the inspiration of my song;
Thine are these early wilding flowers,
Though garlanded by me.

Then press unto thy breast this pledge of love,
And know, though time may change and years may roll,
Each flowret gathered in my heart
It consecrates to thine.

Tuesday, 9th April, 1935.

His work in this style seems to be rare, even outside Grolier's collection; we can trace only one other published example by him, on a two-volume Cicero, Paris, 1565-6, which was Pl. XXV in the Burlington F.A. Club catalogue and is now in the Pierpont Morgan library. Perhaps he was a Protestant who, like Oudin Petit, was martyred for his religion.

Some little happiness have thou & I

[Since we shall die ere we have washed to die]

For thou hast died ere thou didst wish to die.

Smelling before this ruin of sweet life,
And breathing to his brother's excellence
The incense of a vow, a holy vow,
A vow to taste the pleasures of the word,
A vow to be infected with delight,
A vow conversant with ease & idleness.
